

from the ESG DESK

Dear Colleagues,

There are more than 7 billion of us on this planet, and we're producing waste every day. A staggering half of that waste isn't collected, treated or safely disposed of, and it's causing a global waste crisis.

Waste management is a very important step in ensuring the good health - it ensures clean surroundings in our offices and less disease is caused by preventing open dumping and burning of unsegregated waste.

Did you know that by practising responsible waste management we are also contributing to the global goal of reduced inequalities? Yes, it is always the poorest who are harmed most because of lack of proper waste management.

As responsible corporate citizen, we have decided to segregate waste at source in all our offices. We have provided bins for collection of different kinds of waste, and we request you to cooperate with us by following the instructions that are mentioned in the poster (attached here) displayed at prominent places in the office like the notice board, dining area and above the waste collection bins.

Let us make a conscious and informed effort towards segregation of waste at source and better waste management.

For any doubts/clarifications, please reach out to your local admin in-charge.

Regards,
ESG Desk
